

HARDLY anything transpires in this

(From the Daily.)

SOMETHING is always being said about the foreign "society" on these islands and, it would seem, from the general tenor of the remarks, that it is like the little girls' world and doll, "hollow and stuff with straw." We grant that it is somewhat mixed, but we hold that in the

NOTES.

Comments have appeared in opposing journals on the decision of the Supreme Court by which it is ruled that Mr. Gladstone W. Ashford is not an alien person to be admitted to practice law in this Kingdom. The statement is made that "the learned Attorney-General is now very much surprised to find out that no one can be admitted to practice law here, except Hawaiian citizens" (subjects?). A law to the effect having been in force before the Attorney-General was admitted to practice in this Kingdom, we fail to see why he should be surprised. It is true a law was passed last session altering the conditions upon which an alien foreigner can become a Hawaiian subject, but it is not clear that the consequence it will affect persons who arrive from other countries desirous of practising feature is the number of advertisements of timber claims being taken up, there being no less than 217 such notices in a single issue of the paper, covering over 35,000 acres of timberland.

Passing by Litesa's steam mill, we noticed a block of wood which, upon examination proved to be a cross section sawed from one of the "Monkey pod" trees, the only tree of its kind to make room for Mr. Campbell's new building on Fort street. We remember when in 1871 Mr. J. W. Hall grew quite a large number of young Monkey pods of various varieties, and they were planted in various localities down town. Many of them have been cut down since then, and quite a large number of the trees which were left standing had that to be removed to make room for Messrs. E. O. Hall and Son's brick store. The wood is of a compact grain, light and strong, and is not so easily split as it is possible to split it, and for yokes and other articles requiring the two elements

It is amusing to hear once in a while some of the exeses that complaisant, easy-going natures love to urge in extenuation of the indulgence of sinners. "Everyone must have heard the remark," they say, "that the thing is not to be done, or continued application to certain tasks in the case of particular individuals. Many persons are so constituted and negligent as to daily contribute up to the wear and tear of the world. It is nothing to complain on account of any one except their own timid and languid nature. Indulgence is usually best, and much more to do with the capabilities of feeling than with the results is generally fully realized. A regular exercise and temperate diet with a little determination are all that is usually needed. The real cause of the majority of people's have the bogus tyranny of
